Dear Secretary Azar and Secretary Ross:

The United States Breastfeeding Committee (USBC) and the undersigned organizations stand strongly for all families and fight for their health, safety, and well-being. We are concerned by reports that this spring the U.S. Delegation to the World Health Assembly (WHA) undermined a global resolution aimed at supporting breastfeeding, threatening trade sanctions against Ecuador before yielding to a proposal put forth by Russia. Breastfeeding is the nutritional standard for infant and young child feeding as recognized by scientific and health organizations worldwide. It is critical that international, national, and state policies work to protect, promote, and support breastfeeding so that every family who chooses to breastfeed has the opportunity to succeed. We call upon our government to ensure that policy decisions and actions are based on current scientific evidence, free from industry influence, and carried out in accordance to global trade agreements and international law.

The marketing of artificial infant foods in our healthcare facilities severely undermines individuals' rights to make informed decisions and act of their own free will, which is a fundamental aspect of our democracy. This is why these predatory practices are identified as detrimental to maternal and child health, and why the International Code of Marketing of Breastmilk Substitutes is the global standard and needs to be implemented in the United States. Parents need to be informed of medical recommendations, which state that parent's own milk is a primary nutrition source, with safe donor milk as a fallback, and artificial alternatives when medically warranted.

We encourage the U.S. government to take steps to ensure that breastfeeding support is upheld as a primary prevention strategy in all domestic and foreign policy arenas. Breastfeeding builds a foundation for life-long health and wellness for mothers, babies, and all of society. It is considered a global maternal and child health imperative due to extensive research on infant feeding, which has consistently proved critical short- and long-term health risks of not breastfeeding, as well as significant costs of artificial milk feeding. This abundance of evidence is why the WHA expects commitment by all nations to support the health of all families through breastfeeding support. To be clear, nothing in the WHA Resolution or any of the documents it referred to would have restricted access to formula.

Breastfeeding has a critical role to play in mitigating the stark inequities seen globally in maternal, infant, and child health, as well as disaster and health security. Many diseases and deaths due to infant feeding are actually due to a lack of support for breastfeeding and/or a lack of the resources needed to acquire and safely prepare artificial milk (boiling water, clean bottles, etc). Breastfeeding is an important component of women's reproductive health from birthing to child spacing, and it touches all cultures around the world. In the U.S., more than 80% of women say they intend to breastfeed, but far fewer meet their goals. Adequate maternity leave, support for breastfeeding, and workplace accommodations are some of the fundamental programs that would allow women to achieve their goals.

When maternal and infant morbidity and mortality are at stake, any actions by organizations or governments that elevate corporate profit over public health is inexcusable. The U.S. and its leadership must stand up to industry lobbyists and support, promote and protect the health of parents and babies. We stand prepared and committed to lend our expertise to future efforts to support breastfeeding as the first food, both within the U.S. and in collaboration with our global family.
